Deputy Director of Homeless Services for Emergency Shelters

N'Jeri Henry has dedicated over 10 years to meeting the needs of individuals battling mental health disorders. In six years with Interfaith Works, she has worked as a case manager in IW's Community Supportive Housing (CSH) department and worked her way up as a Program Director for Interfaith Works Women's Center at 2 Taft Court. In her new role as Deputy Director of Homeless Services for Emergency Shelters, she will continue her work improving the shelter community through advocacy. Her passion for supporting those who are disenfranchised led her to obtain her Bachelor of Science in Social Work at Bowie State University and Masters in Clinical Social Work with a concentration in Child, Adolescence, and Family Health at University of Maryland, Baltimore. N'Jeri's knowledge of how poverty directly impacts the health of those in dire need led her to volunteer at the National Center for Children and Families (NCCF). There she helped youth find their voices and educated them about various aspects of health. She spends most of her time with her family and traveling when given the opportunity.
