

Paula Warner

Executive Assistant

Paula Warner is the Executive Assistant to the CEO, Courtney Hall. In this role, she facilitates Courtney's ability to effectively lead IW, serves as Board liaison, and is key to IW's smooth operations. Paula joined Interfaith Works in March 2022 after working at The NEA Foundation in Washington, DC. Prior to working in the nonprofit sector, Paula acquired a wealth of administrative experience in a wide range of organizations over the years, prepared by her bachelor's degree in organizational management. Paula grew up in NJ and met her husband at The American University, Washington, DC, and they have raised their two children in Montgomery County. Paula was a fierce advocate for both her children, but out of her compassion for all students, her children's classmates also benefitted from her advocacy in the PTA of Montgomery County Public Schools. Her passion is helping people of all ages, but she has mentored, taught, and spent time with young people of all races, creeds, and cultures. She is also currently committed to the work of helping others as they strive for self-sufficiency in the community. Paula is also a dedicated volunteer at her church, where she serves as communications director, play writer/director, and teacher. She loves spending time with her friends and family (especially her grandson), going to plays and concerts, listening to Gospel music, reading, and soaking up the sun!
